Police to enforce Illinois bike laws

by Dru Sefton

Due to an increased number of complaints from Charleston residents, the Charleston Police Department is cracking down on cyclists who disobey Illinois bike laws.

Maurice Johnson, Charleston police chief, said his officers have started either warning or ticketing bicyclists who ride on city sidewalks, disregard stop signs or ride the wrong way down one-way streets.

Johnson said the police department is getting more strict with bike riders that are violating the law because his office has received "a lot of complaints from citizens" concerning the problem.

The most common violations are riders traveling the wrong way on one-way streets or riders ignoring stop signs, Johnson said.

The police are currently warning the bike riders of violations, but Johnson said if warnings do not help eliminate the problem, the officers will ticket the offenders.

Johnson said the ticket would be considered the same as a moving violation.

Johnson said riders should remember that bikes follow the same laws as cars, and riders should pay attention to signs and traffic lights.

Captain Jack Chambers of the campus police said there have been no problems with students riding bikes on campus this year.

"A lot of students ride their bikes on campus," Chambers said. "There is not a problem unless the rider is in an area congested with a lot of people."

Chambers said if a bike rider is in a congested area, the bike should be walked instead of ridden.

Chambers said riders should obey stop signs on all campus streets, including Campus Drive between Coleman Hall and the Weller tennis courts.

Chambers said because the campus police does not issue tickets for bike violations, riders disobeying the law will simply be warned.

Budget limits plaguing ISSC

by Elise Dinquel

Budget restrictions for the coming year may force the Illinois State Scholarship Commission to limit the coverage of its awards and to eliminate awards for many middle income students who have alternate funding available.

"We're having to redesign our needs analysis formula to move out the middle income students who have alternative resources. The fact that the money needed is not there leaves us no choice," Tom Mortenson, ISSC director for research planning and analysis, said last week.

The ISSC may also choose to limit the amount it will pay for tuition and fees, room and board, and personal expenses as part of the "college budget cost control plan," which will go into effect next year, he said.

Mortenson said the ISSC now accepts without question any reported increases in college budgets for the three areas, but under the plan coverage for all three would be limited.

He said, for instance, personal expenses are figured at $1,200 for this year, but will probably be reduced next year by about $200 to do away mostly with students' entertainment expenses.

"It's difficult to justify including entertainment in personal expenses when we don't have enough money to send all of the most needy students to school," Mortenson said.

He added the ISSC already has begun to implement the plan by reducing award amounts.

In other money-saving moves, the ISSC has already announced it will use the American College Testing (ACT), College Scholarship Service (CSS), and Basic Grant program application forms beginning next year rather than printing and distributing its own forms.

The commission will also use a more uniform method prescribed by the federal government for figuring expected parental contribution, and has attempted to reduce mailing expenses by directly notifying students only of their initial award amounts.

"We just can't continue to run a program this large in the way we have with the resources the state has to give us," Mortenson said.

Mortenson said the ISSC has not yet determined what its budget request to the Illinois General Assembly will be, but added the amount will be announced at its Oct. 19 meeting. The request will be made to the legislature around late November, he said.

Mortenson said, however, the ISSC would need an additional $34.3 million from the legislature to continue to run the program in the way it has been run in the past. He said the changes are being made in the program with the expectation that the state does not have that much money to give.

Area Representative Harry Woodyard, R-Chrisman, said Friday no one expects the legislature to provide that substantial increase (the $34.3 million figure) in appropriations, but he does think the ISSC can expect to receive some additional funds in the future if enrollment figures continue to increase.

Woodyard also said he feels there is a need for the legislators to look further into the ISSC's situation because community and four-year college aid programs have had no substantial increase in appropriations although elementary and secondary school aid programs have been steadily receiving

Grad cutbacks result in wage hike

by Jennifer Soule

University deans questioned recently said that although it meant a cutback of assistantships offered this year, they felt there was a need to raise graduate assistantship stipends.

Graduate assistants at Eastern were decreased by 22 students, because the basic assistantship stipend was increased by $60. Currently there are 187 graduate assistants compared to 209 a year ago.

Graduate School Dean Larry Williams said the increase was made to attract better quality graduate assistants to Eastern.

Williams said the assistantship cuts were primarily across the board although some departments such as math and English received smaller cuts because those assistants teach classes.

Recommendations were made from the Council of Graduate Studies in order to determine the distribution of the cuts, Williams said.

He added the cuts have made it more competitive for the graduate students and has resulted in a decrease in graduate enrollment.

"The cuts are reasonably even in all departments. Teaching assistants were kept because of increased enrollment this year," Williams added.

Williams said there have been mixed reactions from the various departments regarding the reduction of graduate assistantships.

Arts and Sciences College Dean Jon Laible said Eastern must increase stipends in order to attract students.

The College of Arts and Sciences had a total cutback of nine assistantships.

"The decrease in graduate assistants is a natural consequence of improving pay. The increase in pay is a good idea, and the stipends should be increased even more to be competitive with other state universities," Laible said.

Even with the increase, Williams said Eastern is still below the stipends granted at other state schools.

School of Business Dean Ted Ivarie said, however, that the cuts have not been good for the business department. The School of Business received a cutback of one position.

"The business department could benefit from additional assistantships. The stipends should be increased further in terms of financial support to the graduate students, although there should be a heavier work load required with the increase in pay," he said.

Dean of the School of Education Frank Lutz said Eastern should consider granting additional money to graduate assistants.

This year, the School of Education received a total cutback of four positions, with one cutback each in business education, elementary education, special education and secondary education departments.

Lutz added that "the cuts will have an overall effect on graduate enrollment. The more we can utilize the stipends to cover the amount of grants, the more we can increase awards," Lutz added.

Dean of the School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation Walter Lowell said that Eastern should be encouraged to increase the stipends.

The School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation had a decrease of two physical education department assistantships.

School of Home Economics Dean Barbara Owens said that although the home economics department was initially to have one assistantship cut from their program, at the last minute they received an additional assistant's position.

Hinckley to plead innocent; lawyers say due to insanity

WASHINGTON—Lawyers for John W. Hinckley Jr. notified a federal court Monday they plan to contend the accused presidential assailant is innocent by reason of insanity.

The decision means Hinckley's 26-year life will likely be put on display before a jury, including his obsession with actress Jodie Foster. Hinckley wrote that he would "get Reagan" to impress her.

If past practice in insanity cases is followed, competing psychiatrists would play a significant role in the trial—which is unlikely to begin before December. The experts would help the jury decide whether mental illness prevented Hinckley from understanding the wrongfulness of his actions.

A verdict of innocent by reason of insanity would send Hinckley to a mental institution until a judge ruled he was no longer dangerous to himself or to others because of mental illness. Hinckley could face life imprisonment if convicted of crimes in the 13-count indictment.

Nurses angry with Playboy; protest nude photo spread

ST. LOUIS—Playboy magazine's plans to run a nude spread of nurses in the nude has provoked a strong response from some St. Louis nurses who think it will hurt the profession.

Jan Polizzi, a registered nurse at Cardinal Glennon Hospital, is organizing a campaign to boycott the magazine and the product it advertises.

Mrs. Polizzi says the Playboy spread will perpetuate the public's image of nurses as "dumb blondes," that image, she says, has already contributed to the serious nationwide shortage of nurses.

Mrs. Polizzi and other nurses have written Playboy's editors in Chicago, asking that the magazine do an article instead of the picture spread.

Attorney general files suit against deadly fake drugs

CHICAGO—Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner filed suit Monday against 11 distributors of look-alike drugs, which have been linked to deaths in Illinois and elsewhere.

The action brings to 39 the number of firms sued by the attorney general's office in connection with the legal drugs, which are made to resemble amphetamines and can cause death by caffeine overdose.

Fahner has estimated that the drugs, a combination of a decongestant and caffeine, will lead to the deaths of at least a dozen Illinois youths in coming months.

"We have begun to choke off the deadly supply of drugs in Illinois," Fahner said in a news release. "The nation is watching our example. But the problem is huge, and the effort must be coordinated across the country."

He said 15 drug distributors that previously were sued by the attorney general's office have agreed voluntarily to stop selling the drugs in Illinois.

Bylaws topic for meeting

by Yvonne Beeler

In order to review possible committee bylaw changes and discuss a new course proposal, the Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee will hold a special meeting Tuesday.

Committee chairman Lucinda Gabbard said although the committee will review the proposals, she is not sure if the committee will ratify the proposed bylaw changes.

Recently, College of Arts and Sciences Dean Jon Laible proposed changes in committee bylaws concerning the addition of two student members, an increase in the number of members with longer terms, and a system in which the committee's vice president would automatically become president for the coming year.

The three bylaw changes were brought before the committee at the Sept. 22 meeting.

Gabbard said the committee will "hopefully make a decision with the proposals."

However, if no decision is made, Gabbard said the committee will make a definite decision at the Oct. 13 meeting.

In addition to reviewing the bylaw changes, the committee will also review a new course proposal in the sociology department.

Gabbard said Sociology 5350, "Advanced Sociology of Medicine" was inadvertently dropped from the catalog but still scheduled for the spring semester.

The most simple way to rectify this problem is to consider the course a new course proposal and approve it as one to have it relisted in the catalog, Gabbard said.

Alpha Phi wins Derby Days title; Sigma Chi reaches charity goal

by Steve Sandstrom

Sigma Chi Derby Days ended Saturday evening with the Alpha Phi sorority capturing the 1981 championship and the Sigma Chi fraternity reaching their $500 goal for charity.

The proceeds will be donated to the Wallace Village in Broomfield, Co., a facility for minimally brain-damaged children and is the Sigma Chi national philanthropic project, Derby Days coordinator Steve Rosetti said.

The money was raised by sorority members who were awarded equal points for the competition by teeter-tottering for charity pledges and donations outside the Sigma Chi house during the first two days of the competition, he added.

Sororities compete for the title each fall by trying to collect the highest point total by teeter-tottering and participating in volleyball and other games.

Thursday night's skit competition, "Dec-A-Sig," was won by the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, Rosetti said.

The 1981 Derby Darling, Diane Shephard of Alpha Sigma Alpha, was also crowned Thursday night.

Alpha Phi also won Saturday's volleyball finals, with Delta Zeta finishing in second place.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Monday's Daily Eastern News that the Sigma Pi fraternity won the tug-of-war contest sponsored by the University Board and Busch. The Phi Sigma Epsilon fraternity won the contest.

Although Phil Saran is a Sigma Pi as reported, he was shown in a front page picture as tugging for the U.S. Marine Corps team instead of for his fraternity.

In addition, it was incorrectly reported in Friday's Verge that the Residence Hall Association sponsors the Pink Panther mascot. The Housing Office is in charge of the mascot. Also, senior T.J. McClelland has portrayed the mascot regularly for about a year.

Committee needs student input

The Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee needs student members and should approve adding two students to its committee in reviewing by-law changes Tuesday.

Jon Laible, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, has offered several changes to the committee's by-laws, one of which is the addition of two student members.

Laible argues that the Council on Academic Affairs and Council on Teacher Education both have student board members and that the curriculum committee should be no exception.

In light of the fact that the arts and sciences committee is the only policy making committee on campus without student representation, we agree with Laible's proposal. Student input can, and should, be a vital part of any campus organization—including those that make decisions about students' curriculum.

One argument against having student representation was presented by committee member Dan Foote of the chemistry department. Foote says students do not know the administrative process and therefore should not be a part of the decisions being made.

This is no reason to not appoint students.

Students can learn of the administrative process as easily as a faculty member and more importantly, need to be given the opportunity to do so.

The university's role as an instrument of education does not end at the classroom door.

The inner workings of the university community itself offer some of the greatest educational opportunities. Students should not be denied these opportunities for lack of prior knowledge.

Since the College of Arts and Sciences is the largest school on campus, we can see no reason why two student members should not be appointed to the committee. Students need to be represented at the levels where curriculum changes are initiated.

The committee will evaluate Laible's proposals at a special meeting Tuesday. We encourage the committee to approve the creation of two student seats. Student input on a university administrative council is as valuable to the university as it is to the students themselves.

Your Turn

Take the right people

Editor:

It looks like the student senate has really shown its ignorance and shortsightedness this time. Sending six members of the senate for a "weekend of fun" (conference on student government) in New Orleans paid for, of course by the student body to the tune of about $1,800 and opposed by a vast majority of the students, is politically ignorant, yet, somehow expected.

Let's ask a question. According to Mr. Glover, this conference deals with tuition. So which student has more influence on the issue of tuition increases than any other? The BOG representative. Since the BOG can raise our tuition, shouldn't our representative be one of the six whose bill is paid?

Of course not, that would show planning and foresight. Maybe our student body president is the only one allowed to pillage the student fees, and other people who should be "required" to attend must find other means.

Maybe someday the senate will choose members to go to conferences with more foresight. Maybe a year will go by when our student fees are not increased. Maybe Hell will someday freeze over!

ISSC fiasco is fast becoming intolerable

No one is safe these days from the clutches of the Illinois State Scholarship Commission.

I thought I would be spared the agony of having to pay back $100 of my spring ISSC award, but the latest twist of events has proven otherwise.

With an unmet need of $750, I have now fallen into the most recently revised category of award recipients who must pay back $100 of their scholarships.

I am getting tired of the poor management behind the ISSC program, and the way it seems to favor private schools. I feel the commission needs examination by our legislature so that whatever went wrong this year won't happen again.

Professionals supposedly run the commission and I feel we have a right to expect a top-notch program that doesn't mess up every year.

It's not so much the fact that the ISSC has messed up again that bothers me, it's the fact that they keep changing their plans.

The recent decision to change the unmet need amount of students who will have to pay back money to the commission is the latest in a series that began in August 1980 when the ISSC cut off applications six months earlier than it planned because it realized it would not have enough funds.

In April the commission noticed that it was an estimated $2.7 to $3.5 million short of the money they'd already awarded to students. So, they decided to ask everyone to pay back 10 percent of their spring award. That decision lasted only a week or so until the ISSC instead decided to ask all students with an unmet need of $1,000 or less to pay back $100.

Going from $43.20 to $100 is quite a jump and entirely unfair to those of us attending public universities.

The decision to forgo the across the board 10 percent payback came after the commission received complaints from private schools, whose students would be paying more back because they receive more.

Since private schools have always been favored by the

Personal file:

Sue Ann Minor

ISSC, their complaints did not go unheeded.

The fun didn't stop there. Soon the ISSC learned that the shortfall was only around $2 million and so only those students with an unmet need less than $625 had to pay back $100.

Figuring I was off the hook, I didn't give another thought to having to come up with $100.

But now I'm back at school with all the fun worries like rent, utility bills and such, and the ISSC flip-flops again and raises the unmet need figure to $750 so I'm expected to come up with $100.

My big question is: How am I supposed to come up with the money? Sure I have a part-time job, two of them as a matter of fact, but they are just enough for me to meet expenses—there's none left over to help bail out the ISSC.

It's not a matter of being ungrateful either.

If it weren't for my ISSC scholarship it would be a lot tougher meeting college expenses. It's the indecision and continuous mind changing by the ISSC that is irking.

Indian-giver is a term that really applies in this case.

But just complaining does no good. Now that I'm a victim of this mess I plan to do something about it.

You should too.

All of the 1,260 students affected by the payback here should write their legislators and let it be known they are unhappy with the irresponsible way the ISSC has been handling scholarships. An organization responsible for millions of dollars each year should be run more efficiently.

It's the legislature that appropriates the ISSC's money, which is an even greater incentive to air your views.

It's easy to say, "My one letter won't make a difference anyway." But, your letter along with mine, could make all the difference.

Write about bowlers

Editor:

This past weekend marked the beginning of yet another Eastern Illinois University Union Bowling season, and once again, recognition from the Daily Eastern News is nonexistent.

The fine efforts of the football, basketball and other sports organizations are reported, but not those of the Eastern bowlers.

Certainly fans of our highly publicized teams greatly outweigh the number of followers of Eastern bowling, however, no fans are more dedicated than those of the bowlers.

Lastly, for the past 13 years, Harold Gray, manager of the union lanes and coach of the bowling team, has given much of his time, knowledge and inspiration to the bowlers. A greatly respected man on the Eastern campus, Harold deserves credit for his seemingly unending contribution to Eastern.

Administrators to present ideas to alter add-drops

by Cathy Crist

Two administration members will address the Faculty Senate Tuesday to discuss this semester's add-drop situation.

Senate Chairman Lavern Hamand said Samuel Taber, dean of student academic services, and Michael Taylor, director of registration will discuss the problems with add-drops and present some new ideas for a revised system.

"It should be a very good presentation and discussion because all the faculty members are concerned about the situation," Hamand said.

He said some of the problems this year included students signing up for two sections of the same course or adding several classes before dropping any.

Students also reportedly bought and sold business courses that were hard to get into this semester.

Taber said he will talk about the add-drop system and will discuss possible solutions to the problem. He declined to state those solutions before the senate meeting.

Few openings left in CPR class

by Lola Burnham

There are only a few openings left for students to enroll in a free, four-hour cardiopulmonary resuscitation class to be offered at Eastern, a student government official said.

Marc Bruninga, chairman of the Student Senate's Public Relations committee, said Monday that enrollment in the CPR class is limited to 25 people and is "nearly full."

However, he said if enough student interest is shown in the class, another class may be offered in the future.

The class, sponsored by the senate and the public relations committee, will run from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 5 and 6 in Lantz Room 165.

Larry McGinnis, CPR class coordinator for the Charleston Fire Department and another fireman will teach the class, Bruninga said.

Students interested in enrolling in the class should contact Bruninga before Thursday.

After Thursday, the fire department will begin charging for the class, Bruninga said.

Board members elected for ISA

by Patty O'Neill

A seven-member board of directors was elected at the Illinois Student Association meeting hosted at the University of Illinois last weekend.

Two members were elected to serve in at-large positions and five members to represent each governing board in the ISA, Eastern representative Debbie Tymczuk said.

Members were elected from the Board of Governors, the Board of Regents, the Illinois Community College Board, the University of Illinois Board of Trustees and Southern Illinois University Board of Trustees.

Tymczuk was elected to represent the BOG schools which include Eastern, Western Illinois University, Chicago State University, Governors State University and Northeastern Illinois University.

Tymczuk said members did not elect a president because neither SIU-C representative Craig Antes or Illinois State University representative Jerry Cook, both presidential nominees, attended the meeting.

In other business, Tymczuk said, dues for general membership were reduced from $300 per year to $75 per

"The dues were reduced this year because we have enough money to float on for a while," Tymczuk said.

She said she also hopes a reduced fee would draw more schools to join the ISA.

Schools which attend ISA meetings are considered members even though they may not have paid their dues yet, Tymczuk said.

TV sportscaster Roberts dies before show

CHICAGO (AP)—Veteran television sportscaster Bruce Roberts died after he apparently suffered a heart attack in his office just minutes before he was scheduled to go on the air. He was 53.

Roberts, who worked for CBS-owned WBBM-TV since 1949, collapsed at his desk Sunday night at the station's Near North Side studio, according to WBBM General Manager Peter Lund.

Roberts had planned to interview a member of the champion Chicago Sting soccer team during the newscast.

Television station personnel administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation before paramedics arrived and took Roberts to Northwestern Memorial Hospital, Lund said.

He was pronounced dead after doctors treated him for 45 minutes, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Roberts, a native Chicagoan, graduated from South Shore High School and the University of Michigan where he played football. He started his journalism career as an all-night disc jockey in Buffalo, N.Y., before joining WBBM in 1949 as a booth announcer.

At one time Roberts served as the station's sports director and main sports anchor before moving to the weekend sports anchor spot.

He also covered sporting events for the CBS network, reporting primarily on tennis matches and golf tournaments. He was the recipient of several broadcasting awards, including a Chicago Emmy award for a show entitled "Bruce Roberts Takes a Closer Look at Sports" in 1976.

Roberts, whose real last name was Rogatz, is survived by his wife, Lois; two daughters, Karen and Janet; and two sons, Mitchell and Matthew.

completely outplay us."

After a scoreless first half, Gail Neibur dropped in two rebound shots to give the Panthers the edge. Indiana's lone goal came with just 12 minutes left in the game.

In opening action against Michigan State Friday, Moore scored on an assist from Gigi MacIntosh just four minutes into the contest to give the Panthers a quick lead.

Michigan tied the score seven minutes later but Colleen Fletcher's first goal of the season with 28 minutes gone in the half ended the scoring with Eastern on top.

Rugby club scores twin victories against Bloomington

by Anita Busch

More than 100 rugby supporters witnessed Eastern's Rugby Club's dominating style of play as both A and B team ruggers churned out victories, 20-7 and 12-0, against the Bloomington Blues, Saturday on the Lantz practice field.

"The Bloomington game was a very important win for us because it put us into the winners' bracket for the tournament in Champaign next weekend," club president Tom Cunningham said.

"A win there will mean a chance for the club to play in Milwaukee for the regional playoffs," he added.

The ruggers' Champaign playoff tournament is scheduled for Oct. 24 and 25.

Although the Blues scored first in the A contest, Eastern consistently displayed a balanced offensive attack, and twenty minutes into the first half, rugger Glenn Ball passed to wing Mike Mohler to score Eastern's first try, (a try is equivalent to a touchdown in football.) The extra point failed, and at the end of the half the game was tied 4-4.

"The first half was slow, but we improved in the second half wearing the other team out by passing more to the wings," fullback Bob Modene said. "We also picked up the tempo of play and executed plays better in the second half."

In the second half, inside center Joel Storm broke away with a pass from outside center Keith Williams to score the ruggers' second try and give Eastern the lead. The extra point failed again, but the club was in front 8-4.

Williams then received a pass from team member Mark Flynn and broke through several tackles on a 40-yard run to secure the lead with a try. Kennedy booted the ball to add the extra point.

Ten minutes later, Mohler and Kennedy struck again. Mohler scored his second try of the game and Kennedy added another goal-from-try.

The final score of the game was the Blues' 3-point field goal.

In the B game, Eastern notched its fourth straight win, 12-0, while also continuing its four-game shutout streak.

Ned Lane scored with a try in the first half, and hooker Vic Bobb gained two points from a goal-from-try.

In the second half, Mark Horowitz broke away to race 20 yards to assist Mike Birdman on a try.

Field hockey displays 'fantastic' showing—Reichel

by Nancy Saegesser

BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—Despite dropping its last two games, head coach Beth Reichel said her field hockey team turned in a "fantastic" performance at the Indiana Invitational Friday and Saturday.

"All I can say is that we played fantastic," an elated Reichel said.

Eastern handed Michigan State and the host Hoosiers 2-1 losses in opening action at Bloomington Friday, but dropped their weekend record to 2-2 with back-to-back losses to Central Michigan, 2-1, and Ohio State, 4-1, Saturday.

"Friday was great. Saturday was too, but we just got bad breaks from the officials and fluke goals. We played just as well on Saturday," she said.

"It's nice to take a team of kids who are all from Illinois and beat teams whose players are all recruited from the east," the Panther mentor added.

Reichel said her squad performed well against the AIAW Division I competition along with adjusting to the IU stadium's astroturf.

"I was a little worried about playing on the turf but they really adjusted well," Reichel said.

"They played their hearts out," she added. "I couldn't have asked for one more ounce of energy from anyone out there."

But in her eyes, Reichel said she would have been justified in asking a break or two from the officials in Saturday's final 2-1 loss to the CMU Chippewas.

"The officials were inconsistent," Reichel said. "They called one of our goals back and then they gave them (CMU) one that should have been called a dangerous hit."

According to Reichel, one of the Chippewas slapped the ball into the Panther goal as it bounced about head-high off goalie Deb King.

"It went in right past her (King's) face," Reichel said. "It should have been a dangerous hit."

"We completely outplayed them," she continued. "Their goalkeeper was the difference in the game. The rest of the team was slow. She just stopped everything we put at her."

The Panthers got off 21 shots on goal while CMU managed just three.

Sue Carr's rebound shot 24 minutes into the game gave Eastern a 1-0 halftime lead. But CMU tied the score 19 minutes into the second half and put it out of reach two minutes later with their second tally.

That was the end of a frustrating day for the Panthers who lost 4-1 earlier in the afternoon to Ohio State.

"That was a rough game," Reichel said, adding that the Buckeyes spent much of the afternoon pushing the Panthers around with the officials' heads turned in the opposite direction.

"My kids were getting very frustrated and they did a good job of biting their tongues and taking the abuse," she said.

Ohio State drew first blood on a quick score with only 3:50 gone in the first half. Sue Carr knotted the score with her second goal of the weekend midway through the half but the Buckeyes garnered two more counters in the half to halt the Panther effort.

Reichel's squad copped a minor upset Friday in their 2-1 win over Indiana and drew the praise of several onlookers and participants.

Reichel said one of Indiana's players approached Peg Moore after the game and said, "I can't believe it. After you drive three hours to get here and then play one whole game, you still come out here and 1-4 tourney slate, but...

Spikers' showing overshadows poor record

by Kris Nicholson

RICHMOND, Ky.—A 1-4 tournament showing is usually caused by a team's poor performances.

But after returning from Eastern Kentucky's volleyball tournament Saturday losing four of its five matches, Eastern's spikers received nothing but praise from head coach Carol Gruber.

"The results were not indicative of our play," Gruber said. "Our record should have been 3-2 instead of 1-4 but we did make some crucial mistakes."

"I really was satisfied with the way the girls played. We finally are improving in that they are becoming more aware of each other on the court," she added. "I wish people here could have seen us play."

The tournament started slow for the Panthers with their loss Friday to Moorhead State, 15-5, 15-1, which Gruber attributed to her squad's inability to amount an offensive attack. When Eastern showed signs of aggressiveness, Moorhead's blocking abilities shut the Panthers down.

However, the Panthers began rolling against Kent State, playing some "good volleyball" in chalking up their only victory 15-17, 15-12 and 15-7.

"The team decided they were tired of slow starts and they started clicking," Gruber said.

The Panthers' 40 percent ace-attack statistic, which topped the squad's 20 percent season average, was instrumental in Eastern's only victory, Gruber added.

The following matches brought several close games along with some crucial mistakes at crucial times.

"That was when we started having some problems. We played well, but when it came down to the end, we couldn't pull it out and did the proverbial choke," Gruber said.

Eastern Michigan was 0-3 when the Panthers faced them for their third match of the day.

In the contest, the first and last games went to Michigan, 15-13 and 16-14 while EIU captured only the second game 15-6. The Panthers were ahead at different points in each of the defeats, and Gruber cited her squad's tiredness as the main drawback contributing to Eastern's setback.

The Panthers finished up action Saturday by quickly losing to a strong University of Miami-Ohio team 8-15 and 14-16. In the second game, Eastern fell behind 10-4 but came back with five straight points, and eventually took the lead 14-13.

However, once again the Panthers failed to secure the win, and Gruber attributed her squads' lack of killer instinct to substitution problems.

"We had to put in some players at the end of the match that had been sitting on the bench and at crucial moments. It may have brought a slight breakdown in the offense," Gruber said.

Gruber added that future practices will focus on changing the offensive lineup so new people will not have to come in at the end of the game. "We'll also be working on defensive positioning because we had several problems against dinks and middle hits."

Junior hitter Mary Ann Seiwert leaps to spike the ball during the Panthers' 15-8, 15-12 and 15-13 victory over Bradley in the spikers' lone home meet thus far on Sept.
